Mrs. Rebecca Walworth Craig

Mrs. Rebecca Walworth Craig, 17, is missing. She disappeared from the State House during the extradition proceedings over her father, Reginald Walworth of Wilmington, Del., and William John Marshall of Elkton, Md. Both men, wanted in Maryland for kidnaping Mrs. Craig, won their fight, for Governor Ely refused the extradition. But, to complicate the case, Mrs. Craig left. About the same time Somerville police found they had a warrant for Marshall for non-support of his son by a former wife, Marshall today was released until January 12 when his aged mother offered to support his son. Mrs. Ruth Marshall, present wife, was at the State House to aid him. Mrs. Reginald Walworth, mother of Rebecca, was also at the State House. (Staff photo.)

MOTHER TO PAY $4 WEEKLY TO SAVE SON

Marshall, Pleading Poverty, Faces Jail in Non-Support When She Makes Offer

A little old lady—his mother—stood up in Somerville court today and came to the rescue of W. John Marshall by offering to support his minor son during continuance of a non-support charge until January 12.

The defendant, formerly of Danvers, was arrested yesterday at the State House while facing extradition proceedings for complicity in the abduction of Mrs. Rebecca Walworth Craig, 17, in Maryland.

In court today Marshall pleaded unsuccessfully with his first wife, Mrs. Helena Tronka Marshall of Somerville, former opera singer, to drop the $4-a-week charge, and then was ordered by Judge Francis J. Brine to pay $4 a week for 12 months, or, until January 12.

Marshall pleaded that he had no money and pointed to his shabby overcoat.

"She can support him," he declared. "She's a famous opera singer."

Before Marshall could be answered, his aged mother stood up and made her offer to pay for young John's support until the case comes up again.

Judge Brine accepted the offer and when the elderly woman, Mrs. William H. Marshall of Hobart St., Danvers, said she did not have $4 with her, the court told her it would satisfy it if it were forthcoming later.

The defendant and his first wife have been separated for 11 years, following two years of marriage. He was a lieutenant during the war but they had not previously while they were taking geology courses at Harvard.

In 1923 he was arrested for kidnaping his son and was convicted, but the case was placed on file.

BRIDE STILL MISSING

Mrs. Craig, the girl who charged her father and Marshall with abducting her for the purpose of placing her in an insane asylum, vanished from the State House yesterday in the midst of the extradition hearing and has not been heard from since.

Had, Attorney-General Harold Cohn of Maryland admitted later that he had given the girl $5,000 to flee her father.

MERCY KILLING LAID TO FATHER

Wayne, Va., Dec. 30 (AP).—A mountain farmer is held in jail today in the alleged "mercy" murder of his mentally deficient daughter.

When Smith Webb, who, his neighbors say, "did his best" to care for the unfortunate girl for 20 years, was arrested he professed innocence, declaring the girl might have swallowed beetle poison.

Officers said he poisoned his daughter, Maude, and then dressed her in "Sunday best" to place her in a home-made coffin.

"The daughter died in convulsion," Dec. 11. Webb had the body in a coffin at a grave when officers arrived to investigate.

A report was returned yesterday by physicians that she died of a "mercury" chemical than the beetle poison.

BROTHERSTURN FROM PARENT IN COURT

Young Heirs to Anness Millions Placed in Care of Grandparents

White Plains, N. Y., Dec. 30 (US).—In a courtroom drama, punctuated by terrified cries of "mamma," two little heirs to a large fortune were literally torn from their mother's arms by the law and placed in custody of their wealthy grandparents.

The boys, Preston Anness, 7, and Edward Anness, 5, have been the subject of a long legal battle, in which the heirs of their dead father charged that their mother, Anne Anness, was unfit to raise them.

Their grandfather, Edward C. Anness, the senior over the mother, Mrs. Helen Anness Patrick, is a multi-millionaire and a prominent member of the New York Stock Exchange.

Judge Wineschiet of the Supreme Court decided that Mrs. Patrick would have to give up her boys "because she loved pleasure more than she loved her children. But when they were taken from her side in the courtroom it was given to their grandparents, both boys burst into loud cries of:

"Mamma! Mamma!"

Mrs. Patrick, on the verge of collapse, screamed:

"No babies, my babies; you can't take them away from me!"

The children cried and clung to their mother's skirt but a deputy sheriff dragged them out of the courtroom and into the Anness limousine. They were taken to their grandparents' home on Park Ave. in New York City.

In his decision, Justice Wineschiet cited drunken parties in Mrs. Patrick's home at New Rochelle, N. Y., and the fact that Harold E. Patrick, whom she married after the father of the children died in 1927, served three months in jail for "using drugs."

HAD 47 RULES. NO KISSES

Mrs. Rebecca Ross, 24-year-old Trencen, N. J., school teacher, seeking annulment of her two-year-old marriage, said she had asked her "kissless" husband to make a promise whereby he would obey 47 commandments. He refused to accede to her demands. Some of the commandments follow: "That you will refrain from criticism of my family, and from all unkind remarks of any nature"; "that in all our personal relations you shall be a gentleman"; that we shall live in Gloucester as long as my parents are there." A decision also was made to ask the approval of the League of Nations, which amounts to requesting an invitation to hold the conference at Lausanne.

An Arlington policeman's wife was injured in an alleged hit-and-run accident today and the driver was arrested after a one mile chase.

Mrs. Ruth J. Riley, of 20 Pierce St., was the victim, and Fred E. Peters, of Robbins Rd., Arlington, the alleged hit-and-run driver.

Mrs. Riley was parked her car opposite Town Hall in Massachusetts Ave. waiting for her husband, William William Riley, in some off duty. The rear end of the Riley machine was hit by that of Peters and Mrs. Riley was thrown against the wheel, suffering injuries to her knees, chest and abdomen.

Peters, according to Patrolman Thomas R. Pigott, who witnessed the crash, continued on for a distance, stopped and viewed the damage to the front of his own machine, which was considerable, then started off again.

Patrolman Pigott ascertained that Peters was not seriously hurt and drove her car in pursuit, according to Peters on four charges, operating to endanger, leaving the scene after causing property damage, leaving the scene after injuring a person and driving with insufficient brakes.

"MRS. MOONLIGHT" IS THE STORY OF A YOUNG wife who stayed so young her own husband didn't know her. Usually it's the other way about, she gets so time-worn he wonders where is the girl he married. Personally, we hate one idea as much as the other. In fact, we don't recommend it to anybody.

Our favorite motto is, was and always shall be—BE YOURSELF. Poor Mrs. Moonlight was so worried she would lose her husband's love if she grew old she ran away to give music lessons, leaving behind a little daughter, a happy home and a loving husband. She came back periodically—every 20 years or so—to satisfy some urge which completely escaped us and then away again.

Edith Barrett was a winsome Lillian Gishish type without Miss Gish's strength or inner fire—looked lovely in the old-fashioned costumes designed for her, and we would say she did all with the play which could have been done. The playwrights of this day seem to be writing of the most freakish types of women that can possibly be imagined and we would hate to believe exist. Maybe they are the people who eventually inhabit institutions for the feeble-minded—we have often wondered who did really go there.

THERE WAS AN ENGLISH CHARACTER IN THE CAST who was true to life and WE knew it. It was nice to see Kathryn Standing, formerly of the Copley Players, again. She is always easy to look at and does well with her parts. Her costumes were delightfully becoming. Miss Hobbs told US on the way into the theater that WE wouldn't like the show because it was sentimental. But evidently the able manager of the Professional Players believes that the Boston public like things sentimental and we agree with her. We recommend it for those who do. But we think even she will agree that Mr. Benn Levy, the author of "Mrs. Moonlight," is not a James M. Barrie.

THERE'S A FEW MR. MOON-
LIGHTS in the audience—Mrs. George Von L. Meyer, Jr. looking not a day older than when we first met her, and a young girl with very pretty black net, the skirt made entirely of tiny ruffles. Mrs. Wadsworth Busk doesn't change much as the years go by and it still diffi- cult to distinguish her from her charming sister, Louise Fessenden. We usual do it by the hair. The young boy freckles on Louise's nose.

IN THE "OTER HAVING A little puff or two we glimpsed Helen Warren and her mother, Mrs. Sam Warren in the crowd. The first of the girls who were present was Louis's sister, and daddy Mr. Sam Vaughan, and the girls and he is changing. No Mr. Sam Vaughan about him.

Bostonians to Don Colonial Costumes

One of the most interesting affairs we have heard of for some time will take place in New York on Friday, January 22. This is the so-called "First Inaugural Ball of the United States of America" (1789) for which invitations have just been received. The idea was originated some time ago, to hold a ball that would be an exact repetition of the original one held when Washington became the first President.

Descendants of families of famous personages, who were the conspicuous figures at that time, will portray them on that night, only those in costumes worn in special episodes of historical interest being allowed in the ballroom. The climax of the evening will be the pageant of patriotic events which happened in Old New York, starting with the landing of Henry Hudson, and ending in a grand finale with the inauguration of those who will portray their ancestors are Mr. S. Oakley Vander Pool, who will take the part of Melgray Vander Pool; Mr. William Van Alen, the part of Melgray's father, and the well-known family to come to America; Mr. Goodhue Livingston, who will portray Chancellor Livingston, whose descendants will be the administrators of the oath of office to George Washington, Mr. Watson Webb, who will be for the evening his relative, Gen. Samuel Patchley, who will portray the "Jackass" to portray the Earl of London, who was at that time commander of the British forces in America, and in whose honor Mr.

Trayed to Mr. Arthur Ward and Mrs. James H. Snowden, gave a banquet, an affair which will be the subject of the most brilliant games of the ball.

Bostonians and Philadelphians, whose ancestors figured in those days, are also included, as well as those from Washington and Providence. The whole affair has been planned and arranged by a group of architects and artists, all under the direction of Benj. A. Loring, Jr., the wayward, witty, witty, Capt. Kidd assisted by Mr. Christopher LaFarge, Mr. Tony Serg, the well-known maker of marionettes, Mr. Henry R. Shepley, a

No one admired the late Amy and unjust criticisms she received abroad hastened her death. I cannot believe that Amy Lowell was far too great a person to allow such comment to annihilate her spirit; but I do know that she was disappointed in her reception of her

But calling upon Miss Lowell at her charming old stone house at 100 West 11th street, I would invite me to dine with her. Afterward we would all in her library with her friend, Mrs. Russell, read the poetry of the child. Mrs. Russell puffed on a long black cigar. Then she would show me her rows of defective and mystery stories, slaps, and long tales on her shelves, and say how she often

Like many intellectuals, she found that such literature tested her active mind, and she would go back to any real work she was doing refreshed and invigorated.

HOOVER PLANS FOR ARMS CUT UNDECIDED

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—The almost completed American delegation to the Geneva disarmament conference has not yet been told what to do on three important questions, President Hoover has not made up his mind about them.

One is whether the United States will agree to a limitation on the number of arms it may possess. The United States has been that armaments should be directly limited. A compromise suggestion is that the reduction should come in comparison to the amount a nation spent in previous years.

Whether to attempt to prevent aerial fighting forces is also getting detailed study.

The American attitude on whether a treaty should contain a provision which would allow signers to waive agreement is threatened by preparations by non-signatory nations is also yet to be determined.

'LADIES' ALL GONE NOW?

Tetrazzini Grieves Because Girls Have Turned Drinking, Smoking, Mannish Mortals

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Ladies whose charm, coquetry and demure made them as decorative in her own golden days on the opera stage are gone from the world today, Mrs. Luisa Tetrazzini declared.

Instead, modern women are like men, she found. They drink like men, they wear mannish hats, they neglect their homes and they even think like men, Mrs. Tetrazzini said.

The former opera prima donna is here on her farewell tour of America, after which she will return to her small flower garden in Italy.

Artists of today are great, she said, but among modern stars there are no peers for other parts of the world.

"It is not the voice, it is the heart of those singers that made them incomparable," she declared.

Parley will concern the railroad's request for a 35-cent wage increase and the Labor Union's offer to issue for selective unemployment.

NATION TO END YEAR WITH 2 BILLION DEBT

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—Uncle Sam will be "in the red" by approximately $2,300,000,000 for the calendar year 1931, it was revealed by Treasury figures today.

The government started the year with a surplus of about $33,000,000. At the end of the year there was a deficit of more than $2,300,000,000. The deficit in the succeeding six months exceeded the receipts.

There was a surplus of $10,000,000 in the calendar year 1929.

For the past year receipts have amounted to $2,022,000,000, a reduction of $1,258,000,000 from 1929 and expenditures $4,320,000,000, an increase of $1,210,000,000.

Hard times got Uncle Sam going into the red. The depression cut heavily into receipts, principally from income taxes, while at the same time the government was forced to spend several hundred million dollars above normal cost for relief measures.

If additional loans to veterans were considered in the past year, the abnormal expenditures would exceed $1,000,000,000.

Income taxes in the current year totaled $1,208,000,000, a reduction of $907,000,000 from last year. Customs collections were $289,000,000, a drop of $128,000,000.

On the other hand, miscellaneous internal revenue receipts, food up fairly well through the year, aggregating $1,048,000,000, a drop of $164,000,000.

GEMS MILK DIE AT BLAST THROUGH HORN

New Orleans, Dec. 29 (AP)—A way to kill bacteria in milk by making a noise of them and die closed today before the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Sound waves can sterilize milk as effectively as pasteurization, said Dr. Newton Gunder and Dr. J. A. Chambers of Texas Christian University. The method is to feed milk through an inverted funnel. A bellows tube, aimed at the funnel, is vibrated, electrically producing sound waves.

The sound kills 99 per cent of the bacteria. The sound kills because it is a form of energy, but just how it does so is still a mystery.

News that America has won the world race to produce a synthetic vitamin came from Dr. Charles E. Phipps and Francis G. McDonald of Evansville, Ind. They produced for the first time vitamin D, for rickets preventive, from a handful of chemicals.

New light on the laws of chance, which scientists call entropy, was given by Dr. P. W. Bridgman of Harvard. He said laws of chance are not like a pack of cards which, it sufficed long enough, will return to their original arrangement. They are more like shuffling cards that will never return to the same arrangement.

GALBRAITH MAKES HIT WITH GOAL

By FRED JIMPER

It was a brilliant play, a flash of genius, a goal that will live in the memory of all who saw it. Galbraith, the star of the Bruins, made it happen. He was in the right place at the right time, and he hit the puck like a bomb. The goal was there, and he made it his own. The Bruins were down 2-1, but Galbraith's goal made it 3-3. The Hawks were not expecting it, and they were not prepared for it. Galbraith's goal was a masterpiece of skill and power. It was a goal that will live in the memory of all who saw it.
